

ADVANCING STANDARDS
TRANSFORMING MARKETS

F24 on Amusement Rides & Devices Student Program & Next Gen Efforts

What is this group?

The college student & recent graduate group under ASTM International Committee F24 is a formalized group of like minded individuals organized as its own community group.

What does the group do?

As a group, they host multiple sessions onsite during the in-person F24 meetings that engage students and recent graduates, aimed at deepening their understanding of the ASTM consensus process, professional engagement and networking, and industry insights.

The group is encouraged to take initiative on projects that helps the F24 committee as a whole. Other members of the committee are volunteers and they are at various stages of drafting, reviewing, and revising the F24 safety standards that are referenced globally to govern the amusement and attractions industry. They utilize students and Next Gen members on their task groups to assist them with research and to advance their work as needed. Participants are encouraged to volunteer as willing and able.

Who should participate?

All students are welcome to participate. Yes, we've even had high school students! You may be considered a NextGen member by default (recent college grad), but you are newer to the ASTM process... either way, you are more than welcome to join the Next Group for any of our sessions as desired. Additionally, all attendees are welcome to attend meetings of any other task group or sub-committee (excluding the Executive Committee) as interested.

Quick tips!

Join ASTM as a student member for free

Make sure your resume is up to date.

Join our F24 student GroupMe to chat with other active students today!

